Isabel Allende is a great story teller, she transport you in space and in the journey you cannot avoid laughing or crying. I like her as a writer, she opens her heart and invites you to participate in the story. I also admire her because most of her novels are based on true stories and many of them. are personal stories.

Isabel Allende's memoir, Paula, published in 1995, is Allende's first nonfiction book. The story is written for her daughter, Paula, after she fell into a coma. "It was meant to become a journal that I would give to my children and my grandchildren", Allende says, but the book turned out to be a popular bestseller.
