These collected essays examine the roles of women in their churches and communities, the implication of those roles for African American culture, and the tensions and stereotypes that shape societal responses to these roles. Gilkes examines the ways

Religion: A

Multicultural Reader
uses essays written religion. Many in the

the need for a reader

that is both accessible

that shows the American women.

This book meets that need.

The Church of God in Christ (COGIC), an

African American
Pentecostal
denomination founded in 1896, has become the largest
Pentecostal
denomination in the United States today.
In this first major
study of the church, Anthea Butler
examines the religious and social lives of the women in

Online Library

White Womens

the COGIC Women's Department from its founding in 1911

through the mid-1960s. She finds
that the sanctification, or spiritual purity, that these women sought
earned them social power both in the church and in the black community.
Offering rich, lively
accounts of the

Online Library White Womens

activities of the Women's Department
founders and other members, Butler
shows that the COGIC women of the early decades were able to challenge
gender roles and to transcend the limited
responsibilities that otherwise would have been assigned to them both by

churchmen and by white-dominated society. The Great Depression, World War II, and the civil rights movement brought increased social and political involvement, and the Women's Department worked to make the "sanctified world" of the church interact with the broader American Society.

More than just a community of church mothers, says Butler, COGIC women utilized their spiritual authority, power, and agency to further their contestation and negotiation of gender roles in the church and beyond.

What if the most

steadfast faith you'll ever encounter comes from a Black grandmother? The church mothers who raised Yolanda Pierce, dean of
Howard University
School of Divinity,
were busily focused on her survival. In a world hostile to Black women's bodies and spirits, they had to be.

Born on a former cotton plantation and having fled the terrors of the South, Pierce's grandmother raised her in the faith inherited from those who were enslaved. Now, in the pages of In My Grandmother's House, Pierce reckons with that tradition, building an everyday womanist theology rooted in liberating scriptures, experiences in the Black church, and truths from Black women's lives. Pierce tells stories that center the experiences of those living on the underside of history, teasing out the tensions of race, spirituality, trauma,

freedom, resistance,
and memory. A grandmother's theology carries wisdom strong
enough for future generations. The Divine has been showing up at the kitchen tables of Black women for a long time. It's time to get to know that God.

A landmark in the conversation about race and religion in America. "They put him to death by hanging him on a tree." Acts 10:39 The cross and the lynching tree are the two most emotionally charged symbols in the history of the African American community. In this

interconnection in the history and souls of black folk. Both the

represent the worst in the same time a thirst for life that refuses to
